J. Peter Strang is President and Medical Director of University Disability Consortium (UDC), a private, multidisciplinary medical organization devoted to high-quality clinical evaluations and medical file reviews in all the major medical specialties. UDC's reviewers are board-certified physicians, including psychologists and neuropsychologists, with clinical expertise in all areas of disability medicine, including private insurance (individual and group), personal injury, workers' compensation and malpractice.

Dr. Strang is a graduate of Amherst College (B.A), Dartmouth Medical School (B.M.S.), and the University of Washington School of Medicine (M.D.). Following his internship in New York and residency in adult Psychiatry at McLean Hospital in Belmont, Mass., he completed a 2-year Fellowship in Psychosomatic Medicine (Consultation-Liaison Psychiatry) at the Boston University School of Medicine. He remained at the BU Medical Center (Boston City Hospital) as an Assistant Professor of Psychiatry until 1998, where he directed an outpatient psychosomatic clinic and was a member of the active faculty teaching and supervising medical student, residents, and fellows.

Currently, Dr. Strang's professional activities involve the management of UDC and the part-time practice of psychiatry. He is board certified in adult and forensic psychiatry, and is the author of two book chapters and articles on disability related topics.
