

Disability Risk and the Value of Disability Insurance: Trends in Work-Limiting Disability

Professor Andrew A. Samwick 6106 Rockefeller Hall Dartmouth College Hanover, NH 03755 andrew.samwick@dartmouth.edu

Andrew A. Samwick is the Director of the Nelson A. Rockefeller Center for Public Policy and the Social Sciences and a professor of economics at Dartmouth College. Samwick is most widely known for his work on the economics of retirement. He is the co-author of a set of reform proposals that restore solvency to the Social Security system through the addition of investment-based, personal retirement accounts. He has testified three times before Congressional committees on his research. He is a research associate and co-chair of the working group on Social Security research at the National Bureau of Economic Research and has served as a consultant for the Social Security Advisory Board and the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation on the assumptions and methods they use to make long-term projections.

Samwick attended Harvard University as an undergraduate, where he was elected to Phi Beta Kappa and graduated summa cum laude with a degree in economics. He received his doctoral training in economics at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, specializing in public economics and finance. Since joining the faculty of Dartmouth in 1994, his scholarly work has covered a range of topics, including pensions, saving, taxation, portfolio choice, and executive compensation. He has published articles in American Economic Review, Journal of Political Economy, Journal of Finance, Journal of Monetary Economics, Journal of Public Economics, Journal of Development Economics, and a number of specialized journals and conference volumes. Since 2002, he has served as Co-editor of Economics Letters.

In July 2003, Samwick joined the staff of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, serving for a year as its chief economist and helping to direct the work of about 20 economists in support of the three Presidential appointees on the Council. He is the author of Vox Baby (voxbaby.blogspot.com), a weblog about economics, politics, and current events.
